

(untitled poem)

by Anne-Marie Desmeules translated by Oana Avasilichioaei

Under his bed
jars
of chrysalides

some cocoons
starting to crack

I empty the jars
douse the pupae in kerosene set them on fire

he says: they were for you